YANKEE ROBINSON CIRCUS - Season 1866 By Tom Parkinson, CHS.

Forty horses pulled the "Golden Swan Chariot" as the Yankee Robinson Circus pulled out of Winter quarters at Decatur, Illinois, on May 1st 1866. And Fayette Lodawick "Yankee" Robinson proudly led his cavalcade astride a speckled horse and carrying a gold headed cane.

The favorite mid-western show had spent the winter in what is now Fairview Park and on that date opened the tenth season since Robinson first erected his tent -- one he made himself -- in nearby Quincy.

This procession moved down West Main street towards the center of town after a slight delay when the elephant refused to set foot on a rickety little bridge. The circus was not leaving all of Decatur behind for during its stay in the central Illinois city it had recruited the services of local twins by the name of Evans who were to be billed for the coming season as the Wild Australian Albinos.

Two weeks later Yankee Robinson Circus had made its way to Quincy and after the performance there on May 14th, the Quincy Herald reported, "The Great Yankee Robinson Circus has at last arrived and our big ones and little ones will now rest content having seen the great High-Yankee-Dank. Besides many cages, chariots, wagons, etc., the procession was headed by the magnificent forty-horse-band-car, which in itself was a sight worth seeing".

By June 12, the show had made its way to Chicago and great crowds filled the tents located on the Lake Shore at the foot of Randolph St. The Tribune, Republican News, Times and Journal commented on the show saying "The cry is still they come. They enter half eager, half expectant. Their anxiety is relieved, their expectations fully gratified". The great exhibitions of the veteran showman still continue to attract large crowds". A Mr. Dingess was mentioned as General Agent. George Cole was Treasurer, and Charley Parker as Clown.

The circus was in Wisconsin during July of 1866 and the Milwaukee Press had this to say in part, "Yankee Robinson's great show came today. The procession was a mile in length....Yank knows how to run a circus and will be in full blast today and tomorrow at the Second Ward Park. Yankee Robinson appears July 9th at Green Bay and from there is steering for the states of Iowa and Minnesota".

Robinson had one dromedary and one elephant -- a small one -- and according to the Milwaukee paper the bull's act was "excellent, showing great agility". A newspaper article of two years later tells that this show displayed about twenty cages so the number was probably near that during the season of 1866 as well.

Six years after receiving such high praise from mid-western newspapers, Old Yankee Robinson was broke and his show had disappeared. His name was nearly forgotten. It was next heard in 1884 when the Yankee Robinson Great Show, Ringling Bros., Carnival of Novelties, and DeNar's Museum of Living Wonders began to post its bills in Yankee's old territory. In September of that year the famous and favourite old circus man died and was buried at Jefferson, Iowa.

Note on Yankee Robinson photo accompanying the above article: Although at first glance it does not seem that there are forty horses on the bandwagon, close inspection will reveal that the full advertised number is present. They are in ten ranks of four. The outside horse of the second rank from the wagon is difficult to see; however, it will be noted that there are ten distinct shadows on the ground. The elephant and the dromedary are also visible.

The mounted man in the foreground is presumed to be Yankee Robinson. Although this man seems to have a full beard and other photos of Robinson show him to be clean shaven, a contemporary newspaper article said that Yankee led the procession on a speckled horse and that he carried a cane.

This picture was discovered in the files of the local newspaper which saved it because one of the children watching the parade later became a prominent banker.

The author wishes to thank Henry Lofgren, W.H. Woodcock, and the Decoratur Herald Review for information and assistance.

Editor's Note: Certainly the thanks of the OHS members is due to Tom for this fine historical article, and for his kindness in loaning us the original negative from which a print is enclosed for each member. This is a rare circus title, and one on which little is known in the early days. We hope to print more like this later.

Reichert, at Evansville, Ind. The elephant had been ill for over a month and had to be moved about with a garage service truck-derrick. Many members no doubt will have seen this act several times. Roxie was 88 years old, and had been in the act for almost sixty years. She was the oldest of the four elephants in the act - and the smallest.
